"We meet this evening, not in sor-row, but in gladness of heart, at the evacuation of Petersburg and Richmond, and the surrender of the principal insurgent army. It gives hopes of a righteens and speedy peace, whose joyous expression cannot be restrain-ed. In the midst of these, however, He from whom all blessings flow must not be forgotton. A call for a National Thanksgiving is being prapared and will duly be promulgated. Nor must those whose hardships have given us cause for rejoicing be overlooked; their honors must not be pierced out with others. I myself was near the front and had the high pleasure of transmitting much of the good news to you, but no part of the honor for the plan or execution is mine. To Gen. Grant, his skillful officers and brave men belongs all the praise. The gallant navy stood ready, but was not in reach to take active part in these recent successes and reinauguration of national authority.-Re-construction which has had a large share of thought from the first, is pressed much more closely upon our attention; it is fraught with great difficulty. Unlike a case of war between independant nations, there is no organized organ for us to treat with—no one man has authority to give up rebellion for any other man. We simply must begin again and mould from disorganized and discordant elements, nor is it a small additional embarrassment that we loval people differ among ourselves as to the mode, manner and measure of re-HAVING been selected with great care, and from the most reliable houses. In this particular I have no fear of criticism or compensations. As a general rule, I abstain from reading reports of attacks upon myself, wishing not to be pro-voked by that to which I cannot properly answer. In spite of this precaution, however, it comes to my knowledge that I am much consured for some supposed agency in setting up and seeking to sustain the new government of Louisiana. In this I have done just so much and no mere than the public knows. In my annual message of Dec. 1863, and accompanying proclamation, I presented a plan of re-construction, as the phrase goes, which I promised, if adopted by Congress, from such States. This bring Louisiana into proper practical plan was in advance submitted to the relations with the Union, I have so "Ah!" said Capt. Bob. Shorty, treason in their souls, put in youder cabinet, and approved by every member of it. One of them suggested that I should then, and in that connection, apply the emancipation proclamation thereto, and except in parts of Virginia and Louisiana, that I should then drop the suggestion about apprenticeship for free people, and that I should omit the properties against my own power in replete success. Great efforts are made to prevent this; but the strag-glers and "bummers" who follow in the rear of the column, and to whom it is mostly attributable, cannot be controlled, owing to the rapidity of the advance. On the road we came apon a small place called New Store, consisting of half a dozen houses. its name was very well stocked with goods. These were guarded from depredation while the column was passing, but was subsequently sacked, and everything of value removed. Over four hundred thousand dollars in rebel currency was found in one of the wagons captured by us, which has been extensively circulated among the troops. It was designed for the pay-ment of the rebel soldiers, and has been appropriated to its legitimate use by the officers and men in paying arge numbers of the prisoners who have been brought in.
